

I believe the reasons of communicating to loved ones or business interests are much more compelling than those who want to fly in silence. If they consider screaming kids, half drunk conventioners and tourists, and incessant ringing of the warning chimes for no apparent reason, silence. I would like much more the opportunity to use wireless internet during a flight, this way I can still communicate, work or entertain myself in silence.